

Andrew T H Tan is a strategic analyst with particular interests in security, defence, insurgency and regional issues. A prolific author and editor, he has published 17 academic books in the UK and the United States.

His books include: Security Perspectives of the Malay Archipelago (Cheltenham, UK: Edward Elgar, 2004), The Politics of Terrorism (London: Routledge, 2006), A Handbook of Terrorism and Insurgency in Southeast Asia (Cheltenham, UK: Edward Elgar, 2007), The Politics of Maritime Power (London: Routledge, 2007), The Global Arms Trade (London: Routledge, 2009), US Strategy Against Global Terrorism: How it Evolved, Why it Failed and Where it is Headed (New York: Palgrave Macmillan, 2009), International Relations and Security Perspectives of East and Southeast Asia (London: Routledge, 2013) and The Arms Race in Asia (London: Routledge, 2014). According to Professor James Auer of the Vanderbilt Institute for Public Policy Studies, USA, his book, Security Strategies in the Asia-Pacific: The USA's Second Front in Southeast Asia (New York: Palgrave Macmillan, 2011), “needs to be read at the Pentagon, the State Department and the National Security Council.” This book was also nominated for the Asia Society Schwartz Book Prize. His latest book is an edited volume entitled A Handbook of US-China Relations (Cheltenham, UK: Edward Elgar, 2016), which Peter Shearman has described as “an indispensable source on US-China relations.”

Andrew was Associate Professor at the University of New South Wales, Australia, until December 2016. He joins the Department of Security Studies and Criminology, Macquarie University in Sydney, Australia in February 2017. Andrew also previously worked as Senior Lecturer in Defence Studies, King's College London, and taught on the Masters in Defence Studies program at the Joint Services Command and Staff College, UK, Britain's combined military staff college for senior commanders. Educated in Singapore, Cambridge and Sydney (where he obtained his Ph.D.), his advice on security issues is sought by governments, armed forces, universities and research institutes. He is listed in the United Nations Global Experts database.
